

Children's Support Program

The Children's Support Program is a continuation of the Stefan Batory Foundation's efforts towards assisting the most vulnerable groups in society. In the year 2001, our activities were focused on extending assistance to disabled children, socially handicapped children, and to juvenile victims of violence. Above twenty grants were awarded to projects for assisting the disabled, elderly people, neglected youth, as well as to initiatives geared at establishing a community system for treating the mentally ill and emotionally disturbed (under the Local Community program concluded in the early months of 2001).

Assistance to Disabled Children

Our objective lies in ensuring equal education opportunities for children suffering from physical and/or mental handicaps and in preventing their isolation from society at large. In the year 2001, our support was directed first and foremost to projects constituting an element of long-term efforts based on cooperation with local communities and involving volunteers as well as families of the children benefiting from aid. This group of initiatives includes, among others, that of the Synapsis Foundation for the Promotion of Family and Social Bonds (which devised a program for overcoming the social isolation of mute and autistic children), of the Bytom branch of the Polish Association of the Blind (which executed the Education Without Blackboards project, benefiting children and youth with vision impairments), and of the Alternatywa Cultural and Ecological Association of Gódkap (which involved disabled youth in the production of First Steps in the Land of the Adventurers staged for the local community).

Big Brother, Big Sister

The aim of this project is to help neglected children, those who have difficulty keeping up with their schoolwork or interacting with their peers. In many cases, such children do not require the assistance of professional psychologists or counselors as much as the presence of someone who listens and empathizes – a role filled by a volunteer who serves as the children's „big brother” or „big sister” helping them out with homework, spending with them some free time and giving them support. Such volunteers, having received rudimentary instruction and training for working with children, help their charges to gain self-confidence, to break out of their isolation and loneliness. The project is addressed to organizations that work with children and that have experience in working with volunteers. The Foundation, for its part, carries on training activity as well as providing the necessary materials and funds.

During the year 2001, the program was pursued in 57 centers across Poland, including schools, social aid institutions, and non-governmental organizations. Almost 4 000 volunteers, recruited from amongst high school and university students, assumed the roles of „big brothers” and „big sisters” taking care of younger „siblings”. Their commitment and hard work won the recognition of the public authorities; in May of 2001, a delegation of „brothers” and „sisters” was received by Maciej Płażyński, Chairman of the Sejm (the lower chamber of Poland's Parliament), and Barbara Labuda, Secretary of State in the Chancellery of the President of the Polish Republic, played host to a similar delegation in June of that year.

In 2001, the Big Brother, Big Sister program benefited from the support of the Commercial Union – Life Insurance Company (Poland) S.A. Funds furnished by this sponsor were devoted, among other ends, to training of personnel from NGOs taking part in the program, enabling them to improve their skills and to gain more knowledge about working with children and with volunteers.

Child Abuse

Child Abuse is a network program of the Open Society Institute, pursued in Poland and in other Central and East European countries with the use of experience gleaned, and solutions implemented, in the United States. During the several years of the program's execution, we strove to support measures geared at the development of a system for assisting abused children that would integrate and coordinate the actions of state institutions, the local administration, and of NGOs. We also assisted in the training of aid workers from Central and Eastern Europe on the problems connected with diagnosis and therapy for abused children; participants in these sessions included physicians, psychologists, police officers, and judges from Poland.
